LASSI

Believed to originate around 1000BC, this extremely popular yogurt-based drink is mixed with fruit and spices to create a healthy and refreshing beverage.

At Namaste we believe that our offerings can only be as good as the dishes we serve them in and, with a gleam like gold, traditional brass cups seemed the most fitting utensils.

In India, brass is considered auspicious and is often used for special occasions and religious ceremonies. Ayurvedic cooking believes that cooking in brass can enhance the health benefits of many foods and spices.

OUR AWARD WINNING

Granddad's Masala Chai

Our Granddad grew up in Delhi where fresh spices were always plentiful and he seemed to have a natural instinct as to what made the perfect cup. A pinch of this and a shake of that was all that was conveyed to us as nothing was ever written down. Our first attempt failed miserably, but we persevered, adding a little more of this and a little less of that while attempting to hit the perfect balance of warm, tasty, fragrant, invigorating and relaxing.

Eight months and a few hundred cups later, we finally received Granddad's seal of approval - he wouldn't have allowed us to put his name against it otherwise.

At Namaste, we are proud of every single dish, snack or drink we serve, but Granddad's Award-Winning Masala Chai has taken our sense of pride to a whole new level.
